

Public Counsel Volunteer Opportunities

Following are pro bono opportunities, both in-depth as well as limited scope, some of which can be done entirely or in large part remotely. The primary contact at Public Counsel for these matters is Pro Bono Director David Daniels, ddaniels@publiccounsel.org; you can also reach out to the project lawyers identified within each opportunity below.

Limited Scope – Discrete Matters (5 – 40 Hours)

1. ASSIST A NONPROFIT OR SMALL BUSINESS THAT HELPS LOW INCOME COMMUNITIES OF COLOR

For California-licensed attorneys with at least three years of transactional, advisory or commercial litigation experience. Businesses in high-contact sectors, such as accommodation, food services, and retail, are both most affected by COVID-19 and most likely to be minority owned. Due to the lack of generational wealth created by centuries of institutionalized racism, black- and brown-owned businesses often lack the safety nets required to absorb the dire economic impacts caused by this health crisis. The Community Development Project provides comprehensive transactional services to nonprofit organizations and small businesses that strengthen communities struggling with poverty and racism. The work ranges from assisting newly-conceived nonprofits with incorporation and tax exemptions, to providing advice to established nonprofits and small start-up businesses in specific subject areas, including contracts, labor/employment, intellectual property, fundraising law, affordable housing, real estate, land use/licensing, and tax compliance. Many nonprofits and small business have legal concerns precipitated by the COVID-19 outbreak, particularly in the areas of labor/employment and real estate/commercial lease workouts. This advisory work can be handled remotely. Contact: Carlo Castro at ccastro@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: 5 to 25 hours.

2. PROVIDE BUSINESS LAW ADVICE TO SMALL DAY CARE PROVIDERS SERVING COMMUNITIES OF COLOR

For all attorneys. Small day care providers are being especially hard hit with questions relative to the COVID-19 outbreak (for example, questions of business liability due to virus transmission, lease obligations, and labor/employment concerns). These businesses provide critical supportive childcare services to frontline workers in communities of color, which are suffering because of generations of economic marginalization and institutionalized racism. Business lawyers will help answer these limited-scope legal questions, and Public Counsel experts will provide volunteers with needed technical expertise. Interactions with clients can be conducted remotely. Contact: Carlo Castro at ccastro@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: On average, 3 to 5 hours over 2 to 3 weeks; deadlines vary.

3. VOLUNTEER FOR THE APPELLATE SELF-HELP CLINIC - SECOND DISTRICT COURT OF APPEAL

For litigators interested in appellate practice who complete a one-hour training. This self-help clinic at the Court of Appeal is open on Wednesdays for in-person consultations, and also for video or telephonic consultations in appropriate situations. Technical support is provided by the clinic supervisor and certified appellate specialist, Tyna Orren. You will assist self-represented appellate litigants who need guidance and information about their cases, review selected documents from their court file and any applicable appellate record, and help them navigate the appellate process. This is an “information only” clinic; your work ends after you have provided the brief guidance and direction to the litigant at the Clinic or via phone or video. Contact: Uzoamaka Ogbodo at uogbodo@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: Volunteers are encouraged to commit to assisting self-represented litigants for three hours on at least one Wednesday morning or Wednesday afternoon each month. This assistance can be provided either on-site in the Clinic’s suite at the Court of Appeal or remotely by phone or video, although we hope each new volunteer will spend at least one session, and preferably two, on-site to get acquainted. Person-to-person consultation sessions (whether in-person or remote) are scheduled for an hour. For litigants new to the Clinic, volunteers are asked to spend one of their three hours writing a short case description based on documents the litigant provides.

4. ASSIST AN IMMIGRANT WHO IS A SURVIVOR OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE OR OTHER CRIME OBTAIN LAWFUL STATUS IN THE U.S. THROUGH A VAWA, U VISA OR ADJUSTMENT OF STATUS APPLICATION

You will undertake written advocacy and develop strong relationships with your client, the overwhelming majority of whom are persons of color whose victimization is a direct consequence of the institutionalized racism that exists both in their communities of origin and in this country. Most work can be performed remotely, including filings by mail. Contact: Gina Amato at gamato@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: About 40 hours over three to four months.
- b. Adjustment of Status:* For all attorneys. Assist a U Visa holder obtain lawful permanent residency, or a “green card.” This enables her to travel outside of the U.S., provides additional protection from deportation, and allows her to apply for U.S. citizenship when eligible. With fear of deportation rampant in the immigrant community, this is an opportunity to help immigrant crime victims with temporary status seek more permanency in an effort to avoid the threat of separation from their loved ones. This this work can be done remotely, and filings can be handled by mail. Contact: Gina Amato at gamato@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: About 30 hours. Petitions are adjudicated within about 10 months, and no hearings are required.

5. REPRESENT A VETERAN IN IMPROVING THEIR MILITARY DISCHARGE STATUS AND ABILITY TO ACCESS THE BENEFITS THEY DESERVE

For any licensed attorney or legal professional working on a team with a licensed attorney. Service members experiencing symptoms of post-traumatic stress and traumatic brain injury often do not receive the treatment they need. As a result, their symptoms persist and are misconstrued by the military as misconduct that warrants a less than honorable discharge. These veterans are left with little or no mental health or other support. During World War II less than 15% of military veterans were people of color. Today that figure is 35%, and most have suffered under racist systems that the COVID-19 pandemic has dramatically exposed. This is an opportunity to advocate for a veteran's discharge status to be upgraded, which opens the door to VA healthcare and benefits, removes stigma associated with the initial discharge, and increases employment opportunities. The work includes drafting client affidavits, developing supportive evidence, requesting and reviewing military and medical records, and writing an advocacy brief. The totality of this work can be done remotely, and hearings do not require a physical appearance. Public Counsel's Center for Veterans' Advancement Team would be happy to arrange a virtual training with a group of individuals interested in doing this work and our Team will provide all of the technical support you will need for success. If you are interested in representing a veteran in this capacity, please contact Public Counsel's CVA Administrative Assistant at cva@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: 10 – 20 hours.

Some clients will bring affirmative lawsuits to prosecute violations of fair housing laws and to protect the habitability and safety of their homes, or seek damages for illegal eviction. Other tenants will defend against the immediate threat of eviction by their landlords. All cases offer the opportunity to gather evidence, conduct discovery and get into court. You will be provided with training and ongoing technical support by Public Counsel staff throughout. Many cases involve bad-acting family members or unethical professionals operating independently from a prominent financial institution. Consequently, often there is not a conflict of interest problem. Most cases are filed in L.A. Superior Court and offer a rich opportunity to gain litigation experience, including client and witness interviews, strategizing and shaping the case plan, drafting and filing the complaint, propounding and responding to discovery, preparing and arguing dispositive motions, and taking the matter to trial. In anticipation of a tsunami of rental and other COVID-19-related debt collections cases later this year, we hope to recruit and train a cohort of pro bono attorneys who will be available to take on discrete debt collection matters for settlement or litigation, depending on the facts. Let us know if you are interested in being part of this group. Contact: Joanna Adler at jadler@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: Varies.

Litigators and appellate specialists are needed to review appellate records and provide detailed memoranda on the merits of the cases to our Clinic’s Supervisor. In certain cases, the pro bono attorney may be asked to further engage in the appellate brief writing and oral argument – but that additional work is optional. The majority of this work can be handled remotely over the phone, via e-mail, and via access to court records through the internet. Public Counsel’s experts can provide you with advice and support. Contact: David Daniels at ddaniels@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: Varies.

Cases involve drafting client affidavits, developing evidence of in-service injuries, requesting and reviewing military and medical records, and writing an advocacy brief. This is a great opportunity to work one-on-one with a veteran to obtain the benefits they have earned. Contact: CVA Administrative Assistant at cva@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: 40-50 hours.

18. IMPACT LITIGATION: PARTNER WITH PUBLIC COUNSEL’S OPPORTUNITY UNDER LAW PROJECT TO CREATE A FORCE IN THE FIGHT FOR EQUALITY

Public Counsel’s Opportunity Under Law program is led by nationally-recognized civil rights lawyer Mark Rosenbaum and its mission is to address causes of economic injustice in communities that are losing ground in the fight for opportunity. “We do not accept as a given that there must be underachieving schools and out of reach higher education, dead end jobs, homelessness or childhood trauma associated with poverty and the failure of our democratic institutions to strengthen families and afford meaningful opportunity,” proclaims Rosenbaum. “We do not define these conditions as legal problems, legislative conundrums or organizing goals. Rather, they are all of the above and more, calling for comprehensive, innovative strategies to reinvent and reinvigorate those institutions that are the foundation of our democracy. Economic injustice in all its forms is the civil rights issue of the 21st century.”

The creation of Opportunity Under Law dramatically expanded Public Counsel’s impact litigation program, which also develops alliances with organizations specializing in economic research and policy analysis, communications, as well as political and social action campaigns. Consistent with Public Counsel’s long history of pro bono collaboration, Opportunity Under Law works closely with many law firms and gifted lawyers committed to volunteering their time in support of the program’s mission. Whether you are interested in dedicating a team of litigation attorneys within your firm to partner with Opportunity Under Law in the fight for equality, or you would like to donate much needed communication, data analysis or other supportive services to further the cause, Public Counsel wants to work with you. Contact: David Daniels at ddaniels@publiccounsel.org. Time Commitment: Varies.
